Acrow Shares Insights on Doing Business in Africa at Key Events Sponsored by The Corporate Council on Africa, U.S. Department of Commerce and General Electric

(Parsippany, New Jersey) – 10 December 2013 – Acrow Bridge, a leading international bridge engineering and supply company, was recently invited to participate in two major events on doing business in Africa – The Corporate Council on Africa’s (CCA) U.S.-Africa Business Summit in Chicago and the Africa Global Business Forum, a pre-event to the Summit, also in Chicago, presented by the U.S. Department of Commerce, General Electric and CCA.

“Africa is a continent brimming with opportunities, particularly in the infrastructure space,” said Paul Sullivan, Director of International Business Development at Acrow. “We are honored to have been a part of these timely events, which brought together African and American leaders in business, government and finance to begin making important connections in Africa’s most promising sectors.”

At the Summit, Sullivan moderated a panel of business and government leaders on best practices in penetrating the African transportation infrastructure market. He was also a featured speaker at a Summit workshop on building the right public and private sector relationships to start and expand business investments in Africa. Prior to the Summit at the Forum event, Sullivan offered insights as a panelist on how to increase exports to and finance transactions in the fast-growing markets of Sub-Saharan Africa.

Acrow is a leading supplier of prefabricated modular steel bridges to the African continent. Thousands of Acrow bridges connect people and communities across Africa, improving access to schools, hospitals and greater economic opportunity. Acrow has also trained hundreds of African engineers and contractors in bridge assembly, installation and maintenance, and arranged financing for numerous large-scale bridge development projects.
